

New History Knowledge

Things you already know

- The names of yesterday, today and tomorrow
- That you cannot change something that has already happened
- That all young people grow up to be older people

Key Vocabulary

Past	Thing that have already happened
Chronology	Events sequenced in the order that they happened
Change	When something becomes different and does not stay the same

- You will document events to demonstrate chronology
- You will be able to select time words and phrases to describe the passing of time
- You will be able to describe how the world has changed during the lives of our relatives

History skills you already have

- I can talk about the features of my own immediate environment and how environments might vary from one another
- I can make use of observations to identify if an item is old or new

Changes within living memory

Think about how technology has changed during your life

New History Skills

- To look at a range of sources to inform us about the past
- To ask questions to find out about the past
- To sort events and items in groups according to their dates

