

Things you already know

- You know the human and physical geographical features of the United Kingdom
- You know how to recognise, name and locate the equator and both the Northern and Southern hemispheres
- You know the intercardinal points on a compass
- You know how to recognise and locate major cities and counties within the United Kingdom

Skills you already have

- You can use a compass to plan and follow a route
- You can use a range of Ordnance survey map symbols to locate a variety of human and physical features in the U.K
- You can compare a historical and contemporary map of a region of geographical significance
- You can use map features to locate different geographical features in the U.K

Key Vocabulary

population

the number of people that live in a place

territory

an area of land belonging to a particular person, organisation or country

landmark

a building of historical importance

climate

the weather conditions in an area over a period of time

alpine

an area of high mountains relating to the Alps

European Union

a political and economic tie between a group of nations in Europe

New Geography Knowledge

- To name and describe significant landmarks in Europe
- To describe the features of a key mountain range in Europe
- To state the evolving purposes of rivers
- To outline the human and physical features of two European countries

New Geography Skills

- To locate countries and capital cities in Europe using an atlas
- To research different climates zones of the four regions in Europe
- To compare European rivers

